VOLUNTEER STAFF

The 2026 Badger Boys State Staff consists of 145 volunteers. A team of counselors work in each county to oversee the program curriculum and support citizens throughout the week. Administrative members of staff work tirelessly to ensure that citizens are afforded an incredible educational experience. Nearly all members of our volunteer counseling staff are alumni of Badger Boys State. Our decades of meaningful programming are possible because of their hard work, dedication, and passion.

We dedicate the 83rd session of Badger Boys State to three former volunteers who have passed since our 82nd session:

Larry Werner

Louis Ceci
Milwaukee, WI
1927 - 2026

Paul Milakovich

THREE EQUAL BRANCHES OF GOVERNMENT

Badger Boys State, Wisconsin, and the United States have a tripartite governmental system of three separate but equal branches: the legislative, executive, and judicial. This governmental structure allows for checks and balances among the three branches.

LEGISLATIVE BRANCH

The legislative branch is responsible for enacting laws. Members of legislative bodies typically propose bills, which members debate, and if a sufficient number agree, vote to pass those bills into laws. The legislative branch has broad authority to enact laws that address nearly all areas of the general public welfare, including the power to set government policy, tax citizens and companies, borrow money, fund government programs, regulate commerce, fund public health initiatives, and ensure citizen safety.

The legislative branch checks the power of the executive branch by overriding an executive veto, approving or denying appointments by the executive branch, and impeaching officials. The legislative branch checks the power of the judicial branch by amending laws after the judicial review process and by their ability to pass amendments to the Constitution.

EXECUTIVE BRANCH

The executive branch is responsible for enforcing laws. The executive branch executes and administers laws, programs, and policies established by the legislative branch. The executive branch also proposes laws for the legislative branch to consider.

The executive branch checks the power of the legislative branch by vetoing laws passed by the legislative branch and determining how laws should be enforced. The executive branch checks the power of the judicial branch by appointing judges to the courts.

JUDICIAL BRANCH

The judicial branch is responsible for interpreting laws. The judicial branch interprets laws and determines how laws should be applied to citizens and organizations. The courts preside over trials of persons accused of violating criminal laws and over civil disputes between private citizens. In addition, the courts act as referees between citizens and their government by determining the permissible limits of government power and the extent of an individual's rights and responsibilities.

The judicial branch checks the power of the legislative branch by concluding that a law enacted by the legislative branch is unconstitutional. The judicial branch checks the power of the executive branch by concluding that action taken by the executive branch is unconstitutional or is contrary to the laws enacted by the legislative branch.

CIVIL SOCIETY

The following institutions impact representative democracy in a diverse society and ensure government accountability.

THE PEOPLE & PUBLIC OPINION

The people reserve several First Amendment rights that allow for active citizenship and engagement. The right to free speech allows citizens to speak openly about their political beliefs and values. The right to peaceful assembly allows groups of citizens to organize on behalf of their interests. The right to petition the government allows citizens to more directly participate in the governing process.

FREE PRESS

The right to free press is also guaranteed by the First Amendment. The free press helps to disseminate information to the public, to better connect constituents with government officials, and to establish accountability by serving as a “watchdog” of the government.

POLITICAL PARTIES

In the United States, a plurality (rather than a majority) is generally needed to win an election. This is often referred to as a “first-past-the-post” or “winner-take-all” system, which differs from proportional representation or instant-runoff systems. This method of determining election results has incentivized the creation of the two-party system, with Democrats and Republicans being favored in most elections. The two main political parties help regulate ballot access for candidates and create platforms addressing a variety of issues. While third party candidates still compete for elected office, they often prioritize issue advocacy rather than electoral success.

ELECTIONS

Free, fair, and frequent elections allow citizens to evaluate the performance of their public officials and select candidates that will represent their interests. The 15th Amendment and 19th Amendment explicitly forbid disenfranchisement on the basis of race and sex, respectively. The 26th Amendment expanded the right to vote to individuals between 18 and 21 years of age. Citizens of 18 years of age or older are also generally eligible to vote, though certain state and/or local law may restrict citizens who have been convicted of a felony, citizens who are currently serving time for other types of crimes, and/or citizens who have a mental disability from voting.

BUREAUCRACY

The beginning of the 20th Century marked the expansion of the bureaucracy and administrative agencies. Often overlooked due to the specificity of their responsibilities, these agencies make important regulatory and policy decisions. Often, agency leaders and officials are experts in their field. Rather than being elected, these individuals are appointed and often remain employed over the course of several administrations, which provides yet another check on the three branches of government and limits the chance of frequent and cyclical changes in government policy.

INTEREST GROUPS & LOBBYISTS

Advocates of certain political positions may work together towards their political goals by creating an interest group and lobbying elected officials. Lobbyists serve to represent group interests and educate public officials on current political challenges.

Furthermore, interest groups and lobbyists can use funds to support campaigns, candidates, and political movements. The role of lobbying and private influence in government has been an important issue of debate in recent decades. The U.S. Supreme Court has held that political contributions constitute speech protected by the First Amendment, although some contribution limits for donations from individuals and organizations to campaigns for public office and political action committees (PACs) are permissible. Contributions to independent, expenditure-only political action committees, more commonly known as Super PACs, are unlimited.

THE ECONOMY

Public officials often pay great attention to the strength of the economy. The U.S. economy facilitates the trade of goods and services among residents, organizations, and businesses. The government often aims to strengthen the economy through the use of fiscal and monetary policy to maintain relatively low rates of unemployment and inflation. During economic downturns, the government will intervene to attempt to stabilize the economy.

The government is also a significant contributor to the U.S. economy. The government collects revenue through taxation and then plans government expenditures such as public works, military spending, infrastructure projects, welfare programs such as Social Security and Medicare, education, and other development programs aimed to promote general welfare. When spending is equal to taxation, the government has a balanced budget. The government runs a deficit (surplus) when they spend more (less) than it collects through taxes. A deficit can be funded through government bonds and borrowing.

POLITICAL PARTIES

The purpose of a political party is to organize people who share similar views on issues so that those people can persuade voters to elect their candidates to public office, control government, and develop and enact policies favorable to their interests.

Although the Democratic Party and the Republican Party are the most commonly known, many other political parties currently exist, including the Green Party and the Libertarian Party, and others that are no longer active, such as the Whig Party and the Labor Party. At Badger Boys State, citizens are organized into two political parties: the Federalist Party and the Nationalist Party. Those names have no initial meaning, and the parties have no initial positions on any issues. Throughout the week, members of those parties at the city, county, and state levels will identify issues of importance and campaign on behalf of their campaign priorities and political candidates.

During a party caucus, members organize the party's leadership team by selecting a Chair, Campaign Manager, and Secretary. The Party Chair is responsible for planning meeting agendas and presiding over party meetings. The Party Campaign Manager is responsible for coordinating the party's campaign strategy and developing the party platform. The Party Secretary is responsible for keeping an accurate record of proceedings.

During a party convention, members select candidates from the party to run for public office. At Badger Boys State, the nomination of party candidates for city and county positions occurs during the party convention (with cities using all citizens to nominate and counties using delegates), whereas the nomination of party candidates for state office occurs via the State Primary Election.

Organization, issue positions, and campaign strategy are critical to the success of a political party and its candidates. Party members should carefully consider their ideals and principles when designing a platform. A non-exhaustive list of political issues to consider in developing a platform at Badger Boys State include the following: dormitory living, athletics and recreation, Badger Boys State University, general assemblies, meals, city meetings, and election procedures. Outside of Badger Boys State candidates may consider issues such as education, infrastructure, employment, energy, crime, taxes, homeland security, civil rights, corporations, environment, families, foreign policy, trade, health care, social security, and technology.

SELECTING A VOTING PROCEDURE

When we think about voting in the United States, the type of voting that citizens do at the polls on Election Day often comes to mind. Many citizens go to their polling places and fill out their ballot at a booth or vote by mail to select the candidate of their choice. This is what is known as a secret ballot. A secret ballot is a method of voting where individual votes are unknown by the other voters and candidates. Votes are tallied and reported by trusted officials. Secret ballots protect the privacy of voters. At Badger Boys State, a secret ballot vote can be conducted with slips of paper folded and placed in a box, raising hands while eyes are closed, or an anonymous online form.

Legislative bodies, such as Congress, also vote, but instead of voting for candidates, legislators vote for bills. In order to keep our politicians accountable, there must be a way to know whether they vote for or against legislative matters. This is done by using a public ballot, also known as roll call voting. With a public ballot or roll call vote, votes are a matter of public record. This allows for citizens to hold politicians accountable if they implement unpopular policies. However, without privacy, the influences of other interests may impact how politicians vote. At Badger Boys State, a public ballot can be utilized with the public raising of hands, an alphabetical roll call vote with each person stating their vote, or a public online form.

Using either a public ballot or private ballot often ensure accurate results, but their precision also necessitates that the process takes more time. When a quicker vote is helpful, a voice vote is often used. Those in favor call out “aye” or “yes” and those opposed call out “nay” or “no” during the vote. The person coordinating the vote then makes a judgment on which side had the majority support. This method is often less accurate, with division needing to be resolved by a public or secret ballot. However, this method can be quite useful in small groups and when procedural votes are required.

At Badger Boys State, you and your peers jointly determine which voting methods are used at your Party Caucuses and Conventions. As each method has its advantages and disadvantages, choose the one that best suits your situation to ensure your meetings run efficiently.

CITY PARTY CAUCUS | SUNDAY 7:00pm

MEETING PURPOSE

A party caucus is a meeting of political party members. As a resident of your city and a member of your political party, you are entitled to vote on all matters during this meeting. You must work together to elect three party leaders (Chair, Campaign Manager, and Secretary) and approve an official campaign slogan. Then, and only then, you will receive campaign materials and can begin official campaign operations.

LOOKING AHEAD

You might want to consider which city offices (pg. 23) are of interest to you. This evening at 8:45pm, your party leadership team will lead the City Party Convention (pg. 24) to nominate a slate of candidates for all city offices. Nominees will campaign throughout the morning and afternoon on Monday and will have the opportunity to speak during the City Town Hall (pg. 25) at 1:55pm to highlight their qualifications and campaign priorities. The City Election will take place tomorrow afternoon at 4:45p by paper ballot.

CITY BUDGET | DUE TUESDAY 11:20am

Now that your city has elected a city government, your most pressing priority is to pass a balanced budget to ensure the government can remain in operation. Unfortunately, last year's government identified major deficiencies in four areas: infrastructure, parks and recreation, public safety, and health and emergency services. The 'Recommended' amounts below are based on quotes received to fix the deficiencies and include the amounts required to implement the projects.

The influx of new citizens this year and a slight property tax increase resulted in a $295,000 increase in city tax revenues and the city received an additional state grant to support the city's needs. However, the increase in revenues is not sufficient to fund all of the needed projects. In determining the total budgeted expenses for the current year, you must allocate at least last year's level of funding to ensure the city's stability. The additional revenue can be used to fund some, but not all, of the recommended projects. You may face difficult decisions in determining how to allocate funds.

Your city must not run a deficit, meaning you will not have enough revenue to fund all four of the recommended projects. In preparing your budget, consider that the only way to fully alleviate a deficiency is to fully fund a project. Choosing to partially fund a project may be risky. Choose carefully; deficiencies identified last year could result in consequences this year.

Your city should assemble a City Budget Committee consisting of the City Treasurer and other members of the City Council to draft the budget. Their proposal should be considered by the City Council at a public hearing. A balanced budget must be submitted to your City Counselor no later than Tuesday at 11:20am.

COUNTY BUDGET | DUE WEDNESDAY 9:00pm

Now that your county has elected a county government, your most pressing priority is to pass a balanced budget to ensure the government can remain in operation. Unfortunately, last year's government identified major deficiencies in four areas: infrastructure, parks and recreation, public safety, and agriculture. The 'Recommended' amounts below are based on quotes received to fix the deficiencies and include the amounts required to implement the projects.

The growth of tourism this year and a slight property tax increase resulted in a $455,000 increase in county tax revenues and the county received an additional state grant to support the county's needs. However, the increase in revenues is not sufficient to fund all of the needed projects. In determining the total budgeted expenses for the current year, you must allocate at least last year's level of funding to ensure the county's stability. The additional revenue can be used to fund some, but not all, of the recommended projects. You may face difficult decisions in determining how to allocate funds.

Your county must not run a deficit, meaning you will not have enough revenue to fund all four of the recommended projects. In preparing your budget, consider that the only way to fully alleviate a deficiency is to fully fund a project. Choosing to partially fund a project may be risky. Choose carefully; deficiencies identified last year could result in consequences this year.

Your county should assemble a County Budget Committee to draft the budget. Their proposal should be considered by the Board of Supervisors at a public hearing. A balanced budget must be submitted no later than Wednesday at 9:00pm.

Government expenses include salaries to government employees and elected officials; money paid for public services such as public schools, public safety, the judicial system, and parks and recreation; and money paid for infrastructure expenditures such as road repairs, snow removal, bridge maintenance, and public building upkeep.

COUNTY BOARD OF SUPERVISORS IN SESSION | TUESDAY 7:00pm

MEETING PURPOSE

In the remainder of this meeting and during future meetings, county appointments can be approved, the budget can be considered, and ordinances can be implemented, amended, or repealed. The County Executive presides over County Board meetings, and, in the event of a tie, casts the deciding vote.

STATE PARTY CAUCUS | MONDAY 9:00am

MEETING PURPOSE

A party caucus is a meeting of political party members. As a delegate from your city, you are entitled to vote on all matters during this meeting. You must work together to elect three party leaders (Chair, Campaign Manager, and Secretary) and approve an official campaign slogan and party platform. Then, and only then, you will receive campaign materials and can begin official campaign operations.

LOOKING AHEAD

You might want to consider which state offices (pg. 38) are of interest to you. Tomorrow morning, the State Party Primary Nomination process begins. For those running for state office, you will want to consider how to organize your campaign and collect enough signatures to be on the ballot and give a speech during the State Party Convention (pg. 39) Wednesday morning at 9:00am.

OFFICES SELECTED AT THE STATE LEVEL

STATE EXECUTIVE BRANCH

The Governor is the chief executive of the state and is responsible for the general welfare of the state. They ensure that state statutes are enforced and that executive officers and appointees properly perform their jobs. They may suggest statutes to the State Legislature and may veto proposed statutes with which they disagree. Within twenty-four hours of their election, the Governor should appoint individuals to the following positions and continually supervise the appointees for the duration of the session:

The Secretary to the Governor performs administrative duties for the Governor, including managing their calendar, scheduling meetings, organizing events, and preparing reports.

The State Fire Marshal is responsible for inspecting and correcting fire hazards, ensuring that fire extinguishers and a water supply are available and operational, and assisting in general disaster preparedness and emergency services.

The State Health Commissioner protects and promotes the health of state residents. They work with state officials to create policies and practices to prevent and control disease, identify and correct health hazards, and promote healthy lifestyles.

STATE BUDGET

Now that your state has elected a State Legislature, your most pressing priority is to pass a balanced budget to ensure the government can remain in operation. Unfortunately, last year's government identified major deficiencies in five areas: infrastructure and transportation; tourism; education; agriculture, trade, and consumer protection; and health and emergency services. The 'Recommended' amounts below are based on quotes received to fix the deficiencies and include the amounts required to implement the projects.

An increase in tax rates, a decrease in the unemployment rate, additional federal grants, and increased departmental revenues resulted in a $2,367,000 increase in state revenues. However, the increase in revenues is not sufficient to fund all of the planned government projects. In determining the total budgeted expenses for the current year, you must allocate at least last year's level of funding to ensure the state's stability. The additional revenue can be used to fund some, but not all, of the recommended projects. You may face difficult decisions in determining how to allocate funds.

Badger Boys State must not run a deficit, meaning you will not have enough revenue to fund all five of the recommended projects. In preparing your budget, consider that the only way to fully alleviate a deficiency is to fully fund a project. Choosing to partially fund a project may be risky. Choose carefully; deficiencies identified last year could result in consequences this year.

The State Legislature should assemble a State Budget Committee consisting of experts to draft the budget. Their proposal should be considered by the State Legislature as soon as possible.
